Successful local partnerships you can build

Building career pathways that meet employers’ needs
Seneca Highlands IU 9 has a long history of partnering with the local Workforce Investment Board, PA CareerLink® site, and employers. Partners work together to determine industry-specific career pathways from entry-level employment to advanced positions. Businesses provide information to build the paths so the career planning and employment preparation meet employers’ needs.

Supporting postsecondary and training program success
Community Learning Center (CLC) partners with Community College of Philadelphia to prepare adult students for training programs. CLC incorporates comprehensive career exploration and awareness into programming so adults can make informed career choices. Students are given additional support and instruction throughout the application process and training program.

Coordinating resources and sharing information
Luzerne County Community College’s Career Pathways team meets on a bi-monthly basis to discuss current program offerings and workforce development needs. Ten different workforce development and community agencies share employer needs, local job market data, and resources. Partners collaborate to connect job seekers with programs to support work and education goals.

Overcoming barriers to support workforce success
Community Action Southwest’s comprehensive case management approach helps students to address barriers and become self-sufficient. Referrals to community and workforce development partners allow students to build academic and workplace skills while addressing other critical needs. Local employers have provided additional funding to support services to eliminate barriers.
